

August 2020

Thank you for your participation in the HORIZONS study based at the University of Southampton. In March 2020 we decided, after careful consideration, to pause the HORIZONS study, due to COVID-19. This meant that from Wednesday 25th March we stopped sending questionnaires to participants. In recent weeks, we have been going through the process of re-starting the HORIZONS study. We are now happy to say that we are able to resume sending questionnaires to participants. In addition to the usual questionnaire, we will also be inviting participants to complete some additional questions about their experiences as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic.

The safety and welfare of you and the study team are our primary concern. We know this could be an anxious time for you. Macmillan Cancer Support have produced guidance to support people living with and recovering from cancer which you can find on the Macmillan website <https://www.macmillan.org.uk/coronavirus>

Now more than ever, we are committed to continuing our work to understand what is important to people with cancer during their treatment and in the months and years afterwards.

If you have any questions about the study, please contact us by email on

HORIZONS@soton.ac.uk.

We wish you all the very best.
